IN MODERN SCHOOLHOUSE.

The Town Began Three Years Ago to Realize the Importance of Conserving Its Future Citizens' Health and Mentality—Plenty of Room to Play.

Many rural communities feel that any building and any grounds will do for school purposes. These communities have never thought definitely how far they have progressed in so many other lines. The average man will say when you press him for a reason for the poor school equipment in his neighborhood, "Well, that school was good enough for me, an' I reckon it's good enough for my children." His own home, his farming implements, his burns and all else in his life have changed from a "tallow candle and homestead thill" age to an "electric light and a steam thrasher" age.

Three years ago Midway and the surrounding country began to think it was time to have a twentieth century school plant. They began to feel that it would be well to have a building as good as any of their churches. At first the general public shook its head and mumbled under its breath, but gradually it began to see the wisdom of the movement and at last voted the funds necessary.

While the trustees planned a school that should be a credit architecturally, they did not forget to lay enough ground to give the energetic youngsters that were to be trained ample elbow room. The beautiful building stands well back from the turnpike on five acres of fine blue grass land. Behind and to one side of the school building is a comfortable stable stalled to hold twenty-four horses.

As is usual in school affairs all over the country, the trustees built this school with an idea of its taking care of all the pupils in the district for the next fifty years. Now, after only two and a half years, they are beginning to see the natural result of a fine growing school spirit among both children and parents. Today five grade and two high school teachers manage to teach the 250 boys and girls that are enrolled. This number is just fifty more than were enrolled last year. It is now plain that the school will have to add a new teacher each year to take care of the steady increase, and in five more years an addition will have to be built to take care of the children. Besides this yearly increase, the trustees claim that very few of those enrolled even try to play truant. Ample playgrounds, clean, warm schoolrooms, comfortable single desks, light and pleasant surroundings make school going less irksome, and the incentive for "playing out" has been removed.

Several schools rolled into one make many things possible. It allows the school fund to pay for a reliable janitor, who can heat, clean and care for the property as it should be cared for.

MIDWAY'S SUCCESS.

It provides teachers for the different grades and makes efficient and strong work. By bringing many children together it gives a chance for the child to develop his social nature in a group of his own age. That the school at Midway is a success is to put the matter lightly. A school that has enrolled fifty new pupils this year, that has added fifty children to the school population of Midway, that makes the renting of any kind of house in the town an impossibility, that in two and a half years does not show a scratched wall or desk, is a huge success.

Does all this answer the question of investment? Can any one ever figure exactly what stronger men and women in a community are worth? The school cost the community $20,000. Is the money a good investment for Midway? The answer can only come by asking any of the residents in the district of those who are willing to send their children five or six miles and pay extra tuition to have them in a real like twentieth century school.

Jehovah Is the Father or Life-giver of the Church, Who Has Already Begotten the Church by the Holy Spirit and Will Perfect Them as Spirit Belongs in the Resurrection, but Jesus Will Be the Father or Regenerator of the World—Humanity.

for Bible study; hence Bible students see new light in texts long considered obscure. His text today was of this character. It gives Jesus the title, "Everlasting Father," or the Father who gives everlasting life. At one time it seemed to contradict other Scriptures—"The Lord and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us"; "My Father and your Father; My God and your God"; and other texts. But now in the clearer light the contradiction vanishes.

Jehovah God is the Father or Life-giver to the Church; but Jesus is to be the Father or Life-giver to the world. "He shall be called the Everlasting Father and the Prince of peace." Not until the end of this Age will He begin His reign as "King of kings and Lord of lords." The earth is a rebellious province under a reign of sin and death. The early part of Messiah's reign will be for breaking down institutions contrary to the Divine arrangement. Not until after "the battle of the great Day,"—"Armageddon"—will He have the title "Prince of Peace"; and thereafter men "shall learn war no more."

The Second Adam—Jesus.

The first Adam purposed to be the father or life-giver of a human race. But sin, disobedience, interfered with this arrangement—as God had foreseen and provided for. When Adam lost his own right to life, he could transmit to his children only a dying human body. The legal right to life is gone.

Humanity needs a Deliverer—not from eternal torment, not from purgatory, doctrines of the Dark Ages without Scriptural foundation—but from sin and death. What the world really needs is a Life-giver, exactly what God tells us Jesus is to be—a Father, who will give to the willing and obedient everlasting life. The meaning of the word "Savior" is Life-giver.

When the Logos accepted the Heavenly Father's offer to become the world's Redeemer, it involved the transfer of His life to human conditions. "The Word was made flesh" (John 1, 14), not sinful, imperfect flesh, but perfect, available to be a Ransom—a corresponding price—for Adam, that He might redeem Adam and his race. "He was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners."

To be the Everlasting Father, it was necessary for Jesus to purchase mankind by giving Himself a Ransom-Price at Calvary. God raised Jesus from the dead, a New Creature of the Divine nature, to be the Second Adam. "The Second Adam is the Heavenly Lord" prepared to be the Father, or Life-giver.

As only one man, Adam, committed the trespass which involved the race, so the purchase of the race required only the one life which Jesus sacrificed. Whenever He shall apply this merit of that sacrifice to Adam and his race, Justice will turn over the world to Him. For a thousand years He will relegate to suppress forcibly sin and death, and to raise the willing and obedient to human perfection as His earthly children.

As Jesus, the Lord of Glory, is to be the Second Adam, the Everlasting Father to the world, so the Second Eve is to be the Church on the spirit plane. Throughout this Gospel Age an election has progressed, to find and prove whom God will esteem worthy to be made partakers of the Divine nature, "heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ" their Lord, a little Flock—perhaps alternately the 144,000 of Revelation. These will not become the "Bride, the Lamb's Wife," until the end of this Age. "The unwarlike of the Lamb" will come, for "His Wife" will have made herself ready for the work of the Messianic Kingdom.

Deliver Up the Kingdom.
After the thousand years, Messiah will deliver the Kingdom to the Father, as St. Paul declares. Then, as the Father tested Adam, so He will test immunity as respects their loyalty to God and righteousness. This testing will demonstrate who are worthy of everlasting life. The unworthy shall perish in the Second Death.

God has already made provision for perfect men to become the Princes of the world during Messiah's reign; those faithful servants referred to in Hebrews xi, 28-10. Who can know of the glorious privileges awaiting the Bride of Christ, the Second Eve, and not feel stimulated to make his calling and election sure?

How many "dragging-down" pains and distresses and for the derangements and irregularities the "Favorite Prescription" has had many thousands of testimonials from people living in every part of America. Another important thing to carry over is that this medicine is made from such medicinal roots, without the use of alcohol, narcotics, or any injurious element. "I am cheerfully recommending your remedy, especially your 'Favorite Prescription' to all my subscribers," writes one of our favorite correspondents, "I have known a married lady, who has been married seven years, suffer from pains in the back and ovaries. These many remedies but would only transiently relieve her. I was persuaded by a friend to try Dr. Pierce's 'Favorite Prescription.' After giving this remedy a fair trial, I found that it really did just what it is recommended to do. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine, and for all female derangements."

Don't Suffer!

"I had been troubled, a little, for nearly 7 years," writes Mrs. L. Fincher, in a letter from Peavy, Ala., "but I was not taken down, until March, when I went to bed and had to have a doctor. He did all he could for me, but I got no better. I hurt all over, and I could not rest. At last, I tried Cardul, and soon I began to improve. Now I am in very good health, and able to do all my housework."

TAKE The CARDUL Woman's Tonic

You may wonder why Cardul is so successful, after other remedies have failed. The answer is that Cardul is successful, because it is composed of scientific ingredients, that act curatively on the womanly system. It is a medicine for women, and for women only. It builds, strengthens, and restores weak and ailing women, to health and happiness.

If you suffer like Mrs. Fincher did, take Cardul. It will surely do for you, what it did for her. At all druggists.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13.

Talk on the Supreme bench ought to satisfy all the trusts.

New York is to be the National Headquarters for the Progressive party.

We will be willing to forgive all Nixon's promises to be excused from giving any.

The prospects of a small all field in Ohio county seems to be more appreciated abroad than at home.

Don't worry about whether or not Roosevelt can "come back." The people will take care of that question.

James and Stanley seem to be the whole "dinner" as far as the Kentucky delegation in Congress is concerned.

It is none of our fight, but Buchanan deserves a clear field for Senator so far as the Democrats are concerned.

It is a good thing that President Taft does not have the power to place himself and Cabinet under Chief Justice.

It will take another period of low prices for farm products to make the farmer realize the worth of organization.

Let the Democrats have full sway in running the tariff. It will ease the people for another twenty years, at least.

We hope the "Silver" Service business will be carried to such an extent that all persons will be thoroughly disgusted with it.

Even while some Taft organs are burying Col. Roosevelt in oblivion he is receiving a noisy welcome by thousands at Chicago.

Many Democrats will just have their old box hanging until after March. So Santa Claus Wilson had just as well prepare accordingly.

We hope Congress will pass the Hollenden resolution submitting a constitutional amendment prohibiting the marriage of white and colored people.

Developments continue to show that the State of Kentucky, under Democratic rule is to have an enormous debt or to submit to an increase in the tax rate.

We are all to be benefited by the Democratic idea of prosperity. Those of us who have to buy will buy cheap and those who sell will sell high. "Let her come."

Farmers who added the Price-Reducers to get in will have no right to complain when the Tariff is lowered so that foreign cheap agricultural products can be thrown over the fence at lower prices.

It is announced that President Wilson is to appoint ex-President Taft to the first vacancy on the Supreme Court bench. Well, he owes it to him, but how is he going to make such an act square with his progressive principles?

The Progressive party is making arrangements to keep very much in the line fight in the future. It will not give up its position as the confounding party with the one in power to join with a third party. Such a step would be extreme. Especially at this time when the third party is offered and led by a group of reactionaries who are not willing to be turned out by a majority of the people. The Progressives will stand their ground.

It was stated under oath at Washington that President Taft had ordered an invitation of an alliance between the Grand Trunk and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad stopped, because his brother Henry W. Taft was a member of the board of directors and Attorney General Wickensham was a partner in the firm acting as counsel for the railroad. Looks like the excuse which the Bull Moose had for voting against Taft are likely to multiply as the days and years go by.

What Does it Mean?

Just before departing for the Bermudas on a vacation trip, where he could think over the matters of State without being annoyed, Wilson made a statement in regard to the special session of Congress. The President-elect said:

"I shall call Congress together in extraordinary session not later than April 15. I shall do this not only because I think that the address of the party must be to be held as promptly as possible, but also because I know it to be in the interest of business that all uncertainty should be removed as far as possible as to what particular items of the Tariff should be revised."

What does the President-elect mean by saying "what particular items of the Tariff should be revised?" Can it mean that he is not in accord with the leaders of his party on the Tariff policy? It will be remembered that the Tariff plank in the Democratic platform declared that the Protective Tariff is unconstitutional. It was suggested that Wilson should four square upon the platform upon which he ran during the campaign. This Democratic party advocated a wholesale downward revision, doing away entirely with the principle of Protection. To be consistent that party must assume such a position of the Tariff as will put into operation the Tariff for revenue only policy of Roosevelt on all the schedules. If the President-elect is in harmony with his party platform why does he state that the people should know what "particular items" are to be changed? It is now the duty of the Democratic party to change the entire Tariff policy from the Protective basis to the Free Trade basis. It becomes a matter of complete change of policy and not one of a few "particular items" if the platform pledge is fulfilled.

It is likely that Wilson and a number of the Democratic leaders will have to be a little bit slow about wiping out the last vestige of Protection within the present Tariff efforts to the farmers, the laborers, and to the business industries of the country.—Bourville (Mo.) Republican.

The Uncertain Future.

It is a dead certainty that however conservative the tendencies of Mr. Wilson as to legislation, he will approve every bill that has been passed by the Democrats in the House at the last session of Congress. If presented to him, including free sugar, as he has specifically expressed his approval of them, and has attacked Taft for his voters. Those bills affected industries whose products in 1903, as shown by the census returns, aggregated $13,562,310.27. Over $5,000,000 of domestic products now protected in the dutiable list would go on the free list under those bills, and duties on the remaining would not be protective, because the Democrats, including Mr. Wilson, say that Protective duties are "unconstitutional."

An effort has been made to show that Mr. Wilson is not in harmony with that declaration of the platform. But Mr. Wilson has put a stop to that misleading attempt to represent him. In a letter to Mr. H. B. Hayward, of Philadelphia, under date of October 25, Mr. Wilson says: "There are no parts of the Democratic platform of which I disapprove." Hence, believing the Protective Tariff unconstitutional, Wilson will lose no time in getting rid of it.

The future is hedged with much uncertainty. The sugar industry in this country owes its existence to the Dingley Tariff law, and its growth is due entirely to that measure.

The Democrats are opposed to the law. Its effect upon the industry when repealed will be awaited with anxiety and apprehension.—Bay City National Farmer.

Mrs. Hudson Dead.

Mrs. Eliza Jane Hudson died at her home in Hartford early Tuesday night. For the past ten years she had been in bad health, and many times during that period it was thought she might not live. For the past week or so she had been worse than usual and was in about the same condition Tuesday night, when she died. Her death was sudden. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. B. B. English at the Baptist Church yesterday afternoon, interment following at Oakwood.

Mrs. Hudson was 81 years old on the twenty-seventh of last July. She married Allen Porter Hudson, who has been dead for 21 years. For many years she had been a member of the Hartford Baptist Church and was a consistent Christian, who will be missed. She leaves two sons, Mr. James Hudson, with whom she lived in Hartford; and Mr. Alfred Hudson, of Keller, Oklahoma; two sisters, Miss Lucy A. King and Mrs. Natalie G. Richmond, both of Calhoun, Ky., and three grand-children. The Republican joins the friends in expressing sympathy to the bereaved family.

Shortening of the Day.

For a long time it has been known that the days act as a ladder on the rotating earth and that they tend to lengthen the day. This effect is, however, so slight that it cannot be measured in any length of time at man's disposal. MacMillan has estimated, with the aid of certain assumptions and upon data available, that the thickness of the length of the day is one second in 40,000 years.

RELIGIOUS WAR IS THREATENED

Government Appealing To Catholic Church To Restore Peace.

Mexico City, Dec. 7.—A serious situation has arisen out of the platform held last Sunday for Governor of the State of Mexico, although President La Baza was understood to have been elected, no election returns have as yet been filed, and Catholic Bishops and Independents, whose candidates he was, are anxiously demanding an explanation. The Mexican organ, Novena, tonight claims that friends were committed by the Catholics at the polls, and contends that the government has the right to call the election off.

The alleged naming of Flores Magon for the presidency by the revolutionary junta at all times was wholly unauthorized by Magon, who, while anti-Madero, is not a revolutionist. Magon declines to answer the statement by Gonzalez Madero, giving him the lie. He says that when Madero gives an account of the 7,000 pesos he received from the government and places his name he may become worthy to be rebuffed by gentlemen.

Great activity by the Zapatistas is reported from the States of Puebla, Mexico and Morelos. Many towns were threatened by the rebels today.

The government is now begging the Catholic Church to use its influence to restore peace to the country. Minister of the Interior Hernandez is trying to get the papal delegate to induce the priests to exhort their flocks to be loyal to the Madero government. The papal legate promised only to have prayer for peace offered in the churches.

Liberty Bell Petition.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 9.—Mrs. Emma Doane, representative chosen by children of California to present to Mayor Blanton, of this city, a petition signed by them asking that the Liberty Bell be sent to San Francisco to be exhibited during the Panama Exposition in 1915, 1916, arrived here today. The petition contains more than 500 signatures and was carried on a rail car more than ten feet in diameter. It will be presented Mayor Blanton Monday.

After Mrs. Doane has made her plea to the Mayor, the bell will be placed in a truck and be driven through the streets of Philadelphia.

This bell is intended to arouse public interest in the Liberty Bell and will be presented to the Mayor Monday.

The annual bazaar held by the ladies of the Methodist Church, which closed last Thursday, was a success from every standpoint, and the receipts of the three days came up fully with the most sanguine expectations of those in charge. The three days work amounted to nearly $20, with a few small items of expense to be paid from that amount. Many compliments have been heard upon the excellent dinner and luncheon that were served each day, and are certainly received this morning's worth. The ladies of each section have worked long and faithfully toward building the new church and if the plan members could do even half as well the new church would soon be a reality.

Three Fires in One Day.

Last Monday appeared to be a day of fires in Hartford for there were three in town. The first was an alarm that came from the residence of Mr. R. T. Collins, on the river bank and which is occupied by a tenant. Soon in the fire caused the alarm, and the fire had been put out before anyone of people reached the residence.

The second was when the piano was discovered in the rear of the Hartford Music Co., store on the first floor and in the wall and ceiling. This looked like a bad fire at first, but the excellent fire volunteers worked hard for a few minutes to extinguish it. It is a mystery how the fire could have originated, but it is thought that someone in the building had thrown a lighted match, clear or cigarette onto a candle or lamp in the rear of the building and this probably caught a piano box nearby.

The third fire was in the residence of Mr. H. P. Taylor, but no alarm was given. Miss Mary Taylor, who resides with her brother, had gone down stairs after putting coal in a grate up stairs. When she returned the fire had fallen down, burned through a rug and was burning into the floor. A little water soon put the fire out.

ANSWERING HIS CHRISTMAS MAIL

Santa Claus' correspondents live in practically all the countries of the world. The letters he receives—hundreds of thousands of them—are written in all languages. But Santa Claus is an international character, and whether the children who write to him express their wishes in English, in German, in French, in Scandinavian, or even in Chinese or any of the other languages of the world, he can read and understand each letter. The photographer has caught him on a busy morning just before Christmas, and in the corner of his workshop he uses for an office.

CHRISTMAS IN COLONIAL DAYS

Interesting Account of an Old-Time Celebration.

Men Wore Their Hair in Curls and Such Games as "Green Grow the Rushes, O," Furnished Amusement.

republic the journey from New York by sleigh took ten days.

In preparation for the coming festivities, the diarist notes that the keeping room (as the main room was then called), which today would be called the parlor, or drawing room, was trimmed elaborately with spruce and cedar branches, there being no holly growing in that region. Roses made of tissue paper, in red, pink and white, were plentifully distributed through the overgreen decorations.

The roses were made by two young women guests, Miss Catherine Floyd and Miss Mary Floyd, who were engaged to be married to James Madison and Thomas Jefferson, afterwards presidents of the United States. They were assisted in entertaining guests during the day by the Misses Wilgins, neighbors of the general. Among other guests, Bishop Whipple and a fellow clergyman were present, as well as the fiancé of the diarist.

The festivities began Christmas Eve, and all the family hung up their stockings in front of the huge kitchen fireplace. The illumination was that of tallow candles in silver and brass candlesticks. Miss Catherine Floyd had expected her fiancé, James Madison (as was noted down in the diary), and was greatly disappointed at his not coming. He sent, by way of a Christmas gift, a full-length likeness of Gen. George Washington, framed, which was brought by a neighbor returning home from New York.

The merry-making was at its height Christmas Eve, all sorts of then fashionable and popular games, such as "Hunt the Slipper," "Blind Man's Buff," and "Green Grow the Rushes, O," being indulged in by the young people until 10 o'clock, at which hour sharply General Floyd closed the house.

That in keeping early hours he was not altogether arbitrary appears when we learn that the breakfast Christmas morning was at early candle light. The diary says: "It was so early, and I had to take my curl-papers out, so I am sure my hair will not curl at all."

The gay young people gathered in the immense kitchen after breakfast was served, to examine the stockings that Santa Claus was expected to have left in prosperous condition. Of her gifts the diarist remarks: "Such beautiful gifts I have never received away from my home. Some beautiful mink skins, sufficient to make my winter fur and muff, from dear General Floyd, taken from animals caught in a trap near the milk house, Baxter's 'Saints' Rest,' and a nice volume of Watts' hymns from Mrs. Floyd, a white velvet pincushion, painted with roses and leaves, from Catherine, and a pretty collar of lace footling from Mary. My dearly beloved gave me a ruby ring, the emblem of eternal fidelity and love." The "dearly beloved" became her husband a few months later.

"Christmas Day was indeed a joyful one; after we had seen all our gifts, all the young people went to the hill back of the house and coasted for two hours on the hard crust of ice and snow; the distance from the top of the hill to the gulf ravine was nearly a mile."

WHEN THE YULE LOG BURNED

Pretty Customs of Former Times That Surrounded That Necessary Feature of Christmas.

The Yule log on the fireplace roared. The whole hall was aglow. The great hounds lay before the blaze. Dreaming of stag and boar.

One of the prettiest sights of the old-time Christmas must have been that of the Yule log being drawn homeward, surrounded with joyous laughing children, shouting merry greeting to each wayfarer as he doffed his hat in reverence to the log so full of good promises whose flames had the power to burn out old wrongs and heartburnings. On the arrival of the log at the "baronial hall" it was customary for each member of the family to greet it in fitting manner either in verse or song.

In some parts of France there was also the custom of the Christmas log, although there has been a different significance. There the log had suspended from each end the toys, cakes and fruits for the children of the house. These were the gifts Petit Maulet or Christmas child was said to have brought.

In the mountain districts of Germany the Christmas log was supposed to have the power of warding off dangers from lightning and was kept beneath the bed of the master of the house from one Christmas till the next, when it was used to light the new log. On Christmas eve all lights and fires were extinguished in the house and a piece of the last year's wood was taken to the neighboring church, where it was lighted at the flames of the sanctuary light, signifying the new light that had come into the world on this night.

Beaulieu on National Debts. M. Beaulieu declares that the world at the present time is badly governed; that it is in the hands of incurable prodigals and improvident experimenters. As proof of this position he points to the public debts of all countries, which show a decided tendency to multiply, not by reason of stress of extraordinary circumstances, such as war or national disaster, but because the credit of nations is extended to enterprises which should remain within the field of private endeavor.

The CHRISTMAS BRIDE

By IZOLA FORRESTER

am I in time for? I want to load up with gifts."

"Guess you'll have to. It's in your own family. Bob finally got her." Clive turned quickly as the old station agent went chuckling toward the express office trundling a truck of baggage. He followed him, his dark eyes keen and troubled.

"Got whom, Mr. Dunkley? I haven't heard any news from home for weeks. I've been abroad since June, and just got back in time to catch the express west for Christmas. So you see it's all a surprise to me."

"Surprise to all the town. Never thought Bob had the nerve to ask a girl to marry him, let alone that spunky little Lawrence one."

The name struck Clive like a whip-lash. He called good-night and hurried over to where the old station hack waited.

The driver called a cheery Christmas greeting to him, and he answered it, but as they swung up the long rock hill toward the town, he leaned back and shut his eyes and wished he had never come back.

Not that he had any hold on her. There had never been a formal engagement.

He had no right to ask a girl to marry him when he was only a young cub just out of college with his standing to win first. But she had known, ah, but she had known well where he stood, and how he loved her. He could see her now, small and slender at sixteen, still in short skirts, her dark curls flying in the wind, deep dimples at the corners of her mouth, and the swift flashing smile that eyes and mouth and dimples joined in. Yet it had been more than beauty that had held him true through the years. There had been a look in her eyes, a look of abiding faith and clean, straight honor, that he had loved and trusted. The memory of that look had brought him back over the sea, to find her this Christmas and tell her that now he could claim her.

Bob! Stolid, good old Bob. While he had been playing globe trotter, trying to catch the flying heels of a madcap, wayward fortune, Bob had stayed quietly at home and won the girl he loved.

There in the dingy, chilly interior of the old hack Clive fought out his battle with himself. He would be game, he said; he would not mar their happiness with one word or look. He could not go back. There was his mother. He could not give up seeing her merely because Fate had given him a knockout blow, not exactly in the solar plexus, but a trifle to the left.

"All out," shouted the driver joltily, pulling up short before the great old mansion on the hill, with its baroque of tall pines, heavy now with snow. "Wish I was in Bob Patterson's boots tonight. Turned on some illumination didn't they? And, oh, listen to the band. Thank you, sir. That gives the missus and kids at home a little extra celebration."

Clive picked up his two suit cases and swung up the gravel path, hesitated at sight of the brilliantly lighted rooms, and turned quietly around to the side door that he had had occasion to use many a time before when he had been out late larking. It was unlocked, and there was no one in sight. It was still early, about 8:30. Probably the family was at dinner. Yet some one was playing softly in the long music room south of the library. He stood in the dimly lighted hall listening, old memories sweeping over him. It was only a little quaint Christmas carol that Fay had always loved. Years ago, when she had first come to live with them, a little forlorn kiddie, orphaned and with no one but his father to act as guardian, she had loved that carol, and always sang it at holly time. He heard her voice now and gripped his hands as he listened.

Hark, the herald angels sing,
Glory to the newborn King,
Peace on earth and mercy mild—"

She saw his figure reflected in the tall mirror and rose with a half-frightened cry.

"Don't, dear," he said, brokenly, hurrying to meet her. He forgot Bob and all he had heard, and saw only her. "I just got in—nobody knows I am here yet—why, dear—"

She was sobbing on his shoulder, her hands, wrenched from his grasp, held his head against her cheek. Clive saw she was dressed in white soft satin that crushed under his clasp like bruised down; he felt he was robbing Bob, and yet there in the dear old room they both knew so well, in the tender winter gloom, he held her close, and kissed her—lips, hair, wet eyelids—and forgot all except the splendor of the night have been.

"They won't miss you," she managed to say finally, pushing back his face and holding it in her hands at a safe distance. "I'm so sorry—but you see I was thinking of you, and—wanting to see you so, and then suddenly I looked, and you were here, right here, with me."

"And too late," he added bitterly. "Oh, no, you're not, Clive," she flashed back earnestly. "They haven't been married yet."

"They? Who?"

"Bob and Gretchen."

"Gretchen! Who the devil is Gretchen? I beg your pardon, Fay—you don't know what I've suffered— isn't Bob going to marry you?"

She looked at him for a moment in utter shocked silence, then laughed her old ringing, gay laugh that he loved.

"I marry Bob—Bob? You silly, silly—"

"Go ahead. Call me what you like. Who's this person Gretchen, anyway?"

"She's my cousin, Gretchen Lawrence. She came to spend her summer vacation with me, and Bob fell in love with her. That's all, Clive."

"Ah?" Clive sighed and drew her into his arms again. They would make it a double wedding just to pay him back for the misery of the last half hour. Yes, they would. And he'd go back and punch that old fellow's head down at the station for not telling him it was Gretchen Lawrence instead of Fay.

"Oh, Clive, let me go," she whispered. "They're all at dinner, and you know your mother—"

"I know all about it," said Clive, comfortably. He raised her chin gently and looked into the dear, true eyes he had trusted. Fay did not know all that lay behind that look, how, mentally, he knelt in all humility and asked for forgiveness. Yet all he said was:

"I forgot to wish you Merry Christmas, dear!"

ALL ABOUT THE MISTLETOE

Popular Christmas Plant is a Parasite and in Olden Times Was Considered Sacred.

Although in the majority of American and English homes mistletoe is displayed at Christmas time, it is remarkable how little is known of this curious plant. Mistletoe is a parasitic growth, appearing most frequently on apple trees, although it is also found on evergreens and on poplar, hawthorn, pear and oak trees, but very rarely on the last named. It is an evergreen bush, about four feet in length, thickly crowded with branches and leaves. Unlike all other plants, its leaves extend down as well as up. The plant flowers every year, but does not bear the little white berries until it is four years old.

The mistletoe proper is a native of Europe, especially of England and Normandy. In olden times it was considered a sacred plant, because its berries grow in clusters of three—emblematic of the Trinity. The ancient Celts used to hang sprigs of mistletoe around their necks as a safeguard from witches. The maid that was not caught and kissed under the mistletoe at Christmas would not be married within the year, so the tradition goes. According to the old rules the ceremony was not properly performed unless a berry was pulled off after each kiss and presented to the maiden. When all the berries were gone the privilege ceased.

Christmas Presents.

"I thought it better to get you something useful," said Mr. Dobb to his wife, "so I have bought you a couple of good brooms for your Christmas present."

"That was very thoughtful of you, my dear," replied Mrs. Dobb. "I share your ideas, and have bought a good, strong coal-scuttle for you to carry up coals from the cellar to."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Why Nearly Everyone Dreams of Falling.

Nearly everyone has dreamed of falling from a precipice, house top or other high places, but other than calling it a "nightmare" no special reason has been assigned to such dreams until recently, when scientists explain that it is a quite natural dream, resulting from the habit of prehistoric man of sleeping in tree tops when he was away from his cave or cliff or lake dwelling.

Whenever night overtook prehistoric man he did not proceed through the virgin forests and jungles in the dark, for some prowling night beast would kill him. He dare not sleep on the ground for the same reason, so he took to the tree tops.

At the same time he took great care not to fall, for it was undoubtedly his dread that during his sleep he might slip from his perch and fall, thereby securing a cleanup of bodily injury and also of falling near some beast that would promptly kill him. Naturally when such a prehistoric man did fall, he awakened in terror while falling.

And this trait of the days when man was little more than a wild animal of the then new world has been carried down through all the generations. It is well known that to this day a dog will walk around and around in a circle before he lies down to sleep, whether it be in his kennel, in the yard or in the house on a rug or a hardwood floor.

This is a perfectly natural trait in the dog. Away back when dogs were all wild animals, like the wolves, before they had been domesticated by man, they used to sleep on the ground, in the scrubby and various places like that, and before they lay down to sleep it was necessary for them to walk around and around until they had tramped down in the tall grass or bushes or ferns a smooth place where they could lie in comfort.

It is held by scientists that the same old law of heredity that makes the dog do this today also makes mankind dream at times of falling from a great height. There is always terror in such a dream, but one peculiarity of the dream is that the dreamer seldom dreams of striking, for, if he does, the fall is broken, so that it does not injure him. It is believed the dream of dreaming of striking would prove a great injury to one's nervous system, and that nature, in her own peculiar way, provides against such a shock, even in our dreams.

It has also been claimed that mankind has other dreams that result from habits and experiences of prehistoric man, such as dreaming of great heights and especially of being chased by ferocious animals. Women are more apt to dream of being chased or attacked by hideous animals than men. Scientists explain this by declaring that prehistoric women were not the fighters then, any more than today, and naturally feared danger more than the men—

ON CHRISTMAS ISLAND

Land of Fond Memories and Home of Saint Good Will.

THEN, as we journeyed eastward to the Land of Hearts Desire, we came to an island which is called Christmas, where all good pilgrims go ashore. But those who have ventured far from their course, or have no liking to company with their fellows, sail on to the north, which is a chilly sea, or to the south, where the blast is not tempered. For Christmas Island lies straight in the way of the honest mariner, and the stream which runs as a river through the sea hath warmth and fragrance, whereof the shores of the island give pleasant evidence. Now, the gales that sweep the island sweep westward upon the approaching pilgrims, and eastward upon the departing sails, so that the stay within the gracious port is but a part of the joy of that sea.

And as the shores came out of the horizon, a little child called, "Christmas Isle! Christmas Isle!"—so clear is the air of these parts to infant eyes. And the older folk aboard were joyful, too, for off the west coast of the island, which those who have charted these seas call the Shore of Memory, a fragrant breeze began that minute to blow; though of these names I cannot be sure, for the child had a book of his own wherein this shore was named Anticipation. And now the journey meant a few more dawns and sunsets ere a landing could be made, but with each league onward the mellow fragrance was more marked. So there was great dispute among the elder folk to say just what made up the pleasant assault upon our senses, some saying it was composed mostly of this, and others of that.

"It is lavender," said an old lady. "Lavender and spruce and burning candles. I remember the night the new dress was taken from the chest, and we danced beneath the candles, and there was mistletoe, my dear, that was how I met your grandfather. Yes, the breeze from off the shore of the Isle is lavender and spruce and burning candles."

"Ho! to me!" cried a bluff and hearty man. "It is the good smell of well-warmed horses on the snow, with the moon making a double team of them. And it is the good dry smell of popping corn and cooking apples. Oh, yes, and I will be saying there's the brown turkey in it, too. And the smell of a lantern in the barn when we go out to get the horses after the dance."

"Ah," said another—and as I looked I saw he was habited as a priest. "It is the incense, the Christmas incense, which goes in ghostly columns to the darkened roof of the great church as the Three Wise Men go in procession up the aisle attended by acolytes and hooded nuns to do homage to the Babe at the altar. Easter I know by the lilies which smother the incense, but Christmas is incense and music. It is that which makes the breeze so delightful to you, my good people."

"No," said another. "No, no. Ah—now I know what it is. It is back in the hill kirk that we are, where the foot-warmer keep us alive through the Christmas, and it's the faint scorching of honest leather and the faint singeing of homespun that the breeze is bringing you."

"It's caddy! It's varnish on sleds! It's perfume on dolls! It's oranges, and evergreens, and the smell of the wood fire in the fireplace, and the smell of the cold on mother's furs!" cried the child.

And I know not to what lengths the talk might have gone, but the sailors were calling "Shore!" and there was great motion among the pilgrims.

Now, the island is ruled by a saint whose names are many, but in all tongues and races they have one meaning, which is GOOD WILL. And his name is the law of the Isle. For he holdeth that if a man hath Good Will he fulfilleth all law; and if he have not Good Will no law can put it within him; but if he have it he cannot but give proof of it. So that there is great giving of gifts in the island called Christmas, for Good Will is itself a gift which forever branches and blossoms and sets to fruit of its kind. And it is the custom of the saint to meet the pilgrim ships and give those who call upon him the choicest gifts, and when a man hath received any one of them he is forever a citizen of the island called Christmas, with all the rights thereof.

Now, the gifts are hung upon a tree which is called the Tree of Life and they shine with a wonderful light and give off a sweetness which in good time will sweeten the world. Indeed, as all pilgrims know, the reason that shores far distant from the Christmas Isle are habitable at all is that pilgrims have come back bearing their gifts of sweetness and light.

And the first gift is the Gift of the Good Thought, whereby one may break the hold of a narrow veracity which chains him, truthfully enough but all too unwisely, to the faults of his fellows. There are neither riches nor power comparable to the Good Thought, which comes of the Good Sight, whereby men have discovered hidden worth as the miner has found the blackened, bleak and forbidding hillside to be threshold of worlds of gleaming gold. He that receives this gift comes to himself to find himself in a friendly world. It is a gift greatly to be desired, as a fire in winter, a friend in misfortune; and by its magic are miracles wrought on those who dwell far from the kingdom of the Saint Good Will.

And the second gift is like unto it—a mild spirit of amnesty toward all pilgrims whose faulty compass takes them astray, and those who receive it are straightway inducted into the Order of the Forgivers. It strikes from the pilgrim as in the twinkling of an eye, the cold bonds of hatred, vengeance, and all the brood of malice, which make their home with a man but to destroy him.

And the third gift is the Just Judgment, by which the world is vntly lightened by reason of the number of condemnations being lessened. For as is the number of those we condemn in this world, so is the number of disappointments we carry about with us, and the number of the sunny windows we have darkened for ourselves. There are lights of life which a just judgment forbears to extinguish, and he who bears this gift walks in a mellow circle of serene tolerance.

And the fourth gift is that of the Cheerful Spirit, having which one has light at eventide, yea and at midnight. For there is no darkness like unto the darkness of the spirit heretofore of cheerful lamps and fires, and there is no darkness of the spirit that the St. Good Will cannot dispel.

And when the pilgrim has received these gifts he finds among them another, which is the gift of Vision, whereby he sees the unseen. Indeed, all the gifts of St. Good Will pertain to sight and vision, for as the physical eye is the chief of the body's blessings, so is the gift of vision the savor of life, which possessing, no man perishes. For as blind men walk the way and see neither rivers nor trees nor men, so he who has not received these best of gifts walks in great blindness toward a world which encompasses him with beneficence, guidance, protection and inspiration.

And when the pilgrims sailed on, lo! they were new mortals. And no matter how great the distance they journeyed, the pleasant gales of Christmas Isle were always in their nostrils. And they went to many lands, but wherever they set foot, or built a booth or raised a tent, the people knew they had been to the Blessed Isle. And Christmas trees sprang as seedlings from the Tree of Life, and many kindnesses to friends and the poor were borne abroad on the wings of sweetness and light, which forever came forth from the gifts of St. Good Will.—Detroit News.

Christmas Song

Now is the time when holly sprays
Light all the barren, brooding ways,
And every bell, it sounds noel,
A psalm in the Master's praise.

Now is the time when ivies gleam
Like beryl in the morning beam,
And every bell, it sounds noel,
And makes the Master's praise its theme.

Now is the time when mistletoe
Is glossy in the noonday glow,
And every bell, it sounds noel,
To praise upon His name bestow.

Now is the time of angel mirth,
The blessed day of Christ—His birth,
And every bell, it sounds noel,
To ring His praise throughout the earth.

NOT A DAY OF JOY FOR ALL

Those Who Are Happy on Christmas Should Remember the Suffering and Distressed.

"It's Christmas time, friend! What will you do about it?" asks L. D. Stearns in Suburban Life. "Mothers! Aunties! You who love to see your babies head, crooning softly, over their family of dolls, with that grave little smile of dawning motherhood fitting tenderly over their faces, just within a stone's throw of babies who have no dolls, and the mother heart beats in their bosoms just as it does in that of your own sheltered darlings; but their faces are grave, and sharp and old; and little drawn, white lines show about their mouths; and their eyes are not like the eyes of your children. The other day, a baby opened its eyes for the first time on this old earth; it was one of our coldest days; but in the home was no stove, no bit of warmth, no food—almost no clothes! On another street, in the midst of plenty, a woman, with two small babies toddling about, the father out hunting for work, cries—with red lids: 'We've not a dollar in the house, and nothing to eat!' Oh, mothers—oh, adoring aunties—life isn't made up of just prayers and sitting reverently in church, keeping one day in the week holy! There's a try to keep with life that is spelled in many, many ways, if you'd make it complete."

Women and the Ballot

Weiner-Neustadt and Waldhofen, Austria, have just given the women taxpayers the ballot, making voting compulsory for women as well as men. The legislature of Manitoba recently permitted women to practice law. The legislature of Georgia only a few days after defeated a similar amendment.

"TO HELL WITH CONSTITUTION"

Gov. Blease of South Carolina Shocks Governors' Conference.

Richmond, Va., December 6.—Many women in attendance on the governors' conference yesterday hurriedly left the hall when Governor Cole Blease of South Carolina, for the second time defending his doctrine of lynching negroes guilty of criminal assault without a trial, shouted the words: "To hell with the constitution."

This sentiment was in response to a question by Governor Joseph N. Carey of Wyoming, who desired to know if Governor Blease had not taken an oath to uphold the constitution and laws of his state and if those laws did not protect colored men as well as white men.

"I will answer that question," replied the South Carolinian. "and I hope the newspaper men will ask it right, for in my campaign in South Carolina they found that I am a fighter—and a cold-blooded fighter. When the constitution stops between me and the defense of the white of the white woman of my state, I will resign my commission and fear it up and throw it to the breezes. I have heretofore said 'To hell with the constitution.'"

When the women, some of them wives and daughters of the governors left the hall, Governor Blease subsided.

Gov. Albert W. Gilchrist of Florida, answered Governor Blease. "The first thing," he said, "that indicates a manly man or a womanly woman is thoughtful consideration for other people."

Later Governor John F. Shafer of Colorado, referred to the lynch law doctrine.

"One mob can do more injury to society," he said, "than 20 magis-ters because a lynching permeates the entire community and produces anxiety. The influence of mob rule is most reprehensible. When laws are made it should be the duty of a governor to enforce them, whether he approves them or not. When the law prescribes hanging for an offense and a man is found guilty he should be hanged, whether white or black, and I encourage it to be our duty as governors to replace for law and order."
